“ Farewell, my sweet, sweet, Dottie! When first we met you were probably in your mid 70's. I was your new neighbor when you lived on Quest St. It was the middle of winter and the middle of an ice storm. I was not familiar with the ice storms of the Ozarks, having come from out of state. I began walking down the hill, fell, and slid on my bottom all the way to our houses. You opened your front door, and began clapping. Your laugh was contagious, and we became instant friends. After that moment I would stop at your house in the evenings after work and we became great confidants. You were a very social person and had a large nucleolus of friends. I could hear laughter eliminating from your house as you entertained friends til wee hours. I greatly missed you when you moved away. I will see you again in heaven. I love you, Dottie!
