“ I miss you so much Daddy. More than i could ever explain.... Im still so hurt, and broken. But I seem to be masking those emotions pretty well. Not that that is a good thing. But There isnt a day that goes by I dont think of you. You are always truly on my mind. That will NEVER change. I miss late night conversations, Working on new projects, vibing and bonding with you. I miss being able to come to you about absolutely anything and know you would support me 100%. Life isnt the same without you here. There is an emptiness. And from my heart.... I am truly so sorry I didnt listen, was so so disrespectful, and didn't pay you enough attention. Some days I can't control how incredibly hurt and broken I am, because I know there was so much that still needed to be said and done. Although I write you letters everyday... its still not the same as expressing that to you in person. Being able to hear your response, feel your love, appreciate your support, and accept youre constructive criticism. I needed you here with me. We all did. And now we have to do it on our own. Every step of the way. It hurts me you wont be there for our weddings, to meet your grandchildren, see us grow. Youre not there to share my success and mistakes. I will forever wish, other than my dreams, which ive only had 3... i could see you. Hug you. Hear you say how proud of me you are and love me. Because I love you. And I will always love you

“ I remember, when we were about 16-17, just sitting in the camper at Jeff's parents' house listening to music and talking for hours. Every time I hear certain songs, I'm reminded of those simple days. Rest easy, my friend.

“ I'd like to share how I met my good friend Jeff. He was a mechanic at a shop. And I had gone in about some things for my suburban. Needless to say they were going to swindle me. And Jeff saw that and knew that and later that day called me and told me he would do the work himself. That says so much about a person to save somebody that you don't even know from being had. And it was the start of a great friendship. I just don't want to see this being the way it ends. My condolences to his family from mine...
I love you friend.

“ Jeff,
I'm sending you this angel
to guide and care for you,
As I'll also send one to your loved ones here because I know you'd want me to.
You've always had such a great big heart
Filled with love and honesty,
I just wish I had known how blue.
But, Now you're with the best of them ,
Even the Angels in our heavens and godly one too.
So fly high our Jeff and one day I'll see you up there soon.
Your friend
Krista
