“ I see I'm the only one that talks to you. Not only on here, but in my prayers too. I wish you could respond. I hear you all the time. In my mind. I've tried to see you. I've seen you twice since you left me, us. Once in my dream. you sat at the end of grandmas bed, I was the ghost, grandma was dieing. you disappeared. So did she. The other At the farm house in the barn you told me not to swing to high on the rope. I know you know I love you and miss you dearly. And as I get older I realize I'm getting closer and closer to you. Xoxo

“ Randy was my grandpa. He loved me more than anything in the world My dad, sisters, and Mindy went to the funeral. I didn't get to go. They knew that if I went I wouldn't be able to control myself. It was the best thing for me. He came back in grandpa's truck with lots of totes of his stuff. I remember going through all the totes smelling his t-shirts. I shut down after that. My life as like a never ending surgery after that, I never really truly came out of it. I had negative behavior to the point where I overdosed because I wanted to be with him. I couldn't do this, life, without him. He was my dad, not only that but my best friend. I wanted to die, I shut everyone out. I couldn't stand life without him. I loved him more than anything in the world. I would do anything for him I would die for him. He promised me 100 years when I was 5 not 7. He was my everything. For a while, I was depressed, a long while. Now 3 years later, i'm still moving on, but now I look at the positives and The good memories we've had, like when I jumped in the wrong side of the pool when I was 7, he jumped in and saved me I could have drown. I've realized that he's not coming back, no matter how hard I pray or how many times I ball my eyes out I can't change it so from now on i'm not going to dwell on it. I can't say it's not ok to think about it or cry once in awhile because it is. It is ok to cry. I will always remember my grandpa.
